Broadband Home Solutions, Motorola Home and Networks Mobility

Bob Wilson is General Manager, Networked Video Solutions Group, Motorola Home and Networks Mobility. Wilson's (NVS) business focuses on the large and growing global opportunities in supplying complete video infrastructure solutions to service providers in the cable, satellite, telco and programmer marketplace. The NVS portfolio includes network equipment for ad insertion, encoding, IRDs and modular uplinks as well as video-on-demand and switched digital video solutions.

Since joining Motorola, Wilson was the chairman and CEO of Modulus Video, a leading innovator of MPEG-4 AVC video encoding systems that was acquired by Motorola in July 2007. During his tenure, the company grew from its startup phase into the world's leading provider of advanced video encoding solutions for the burgeoning IPTV market.

Wilson's extensive experience in the television technologies includes seven years as an executive of Pinnacle Systems including president of the Broadcast Solutions Division. Wilson served as executive vice president, chief operating officer, chief financial officer and as a member of the board of Accom, Inc., another pioneering video company. He also served as president and chief executive officer of The Grass Valley Group Wilson. Early in his career, Wilson held a variety of senior executive level positions in general management, finance, marketing, and sales for Ampex Corporation.

Wilson also served as vice president of Merchant Banking for investment bank Wasserstein Perella. Mr. Wilson holds a Bachelor of Science degree in economics from The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania.
